So, what does all this mean to us. Well, Dr. Edward Bach held the notion that the source illness or disease was emotional in nature. And when one ponders what emotions really are, one can conclude that each emotion is a particular energetic state of being. All emotions seem to have a particular energy - love, despair, anger, fear, appreciation - one can consider each of these a different energetic pattern.

Bach considered negative energetic states, negative emotions, to be the source of disease in the body, a theory supported by
